There will be more letters on the dust nuisance to-morrow.

The Rev Mr Montague's letter on the dust "nuisance" struck a popular chord. The people who are induced to come here for their health have a right to demand that measures be taken to abolish the dust.

It will greatly help the committee on the art loan exhibition if parties who have anything to furnish for the exhibition will kindly let the committee know. We trust all our readers will show some public spirit in this matter, as for the credit of the town, the exhibition should show the best we have.

Mr. W. R. Gibbs is just starting the Falcon Herald, to be published at Falcon. The first issue will be published on Wednesday. He already has two hundred subscribers. This is very good, considering the town has just been started. In two or three days it is expected that the Rock Island will reach that town and there will then be quite a celebration. There is no better sign of the growth of the county than the establishment of so many new papers. Five years ago there was no paper published in the county outside of this city. Now there is one at Manitou, which is daily during the summer, two at Colorado City, one at Fountain, one at Monument and now another for the eastern section of the county. Some of them [illegible] but they are a very good sign, for they show that the people are getting the press all the same. Every section should at least patronize its home paper. We hope every one in the eastern part of the county will be a subscriber of the Falcon Herald.

The News printed yesterday the Hon T. M. Patterson's speech at Leadville. His waggle on the lead question was very interesting. He first shows that it is for the advantage of the miner to reduce the tariff on lead because the miner will have a specific rate for his lead as good as he is getting now, and the speculator will not have a chance to [illegible] Lead will have room to sell and then drop two cents a pound when they do come to the market. The reasoning was quite satisfactory. But Mr. Patterson unfortunately ended this discussion by saying that if he had been the reduction of the tariff on lead. If his first reasoning was correct such a vote would have been against the interest of the miners. If Mr. Patterson's reasoning was correct, his vote would have been in the interest of the miners. The Life of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe by Mr. Stanley Lane Poole will shortly be published by Longmans, Green & Co. It will give an inside view of the diplomatic events which led to the Crimean War, and a complete answer as to the part of the splendid Lord Stratford de Redcliffe is known to Americans chiefly as the Great Elchi [illegible]

THE SOUTHERN COLONEL.

His Novel Method of Measuring Gentility, Etiquette and Local Hospitality.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept 21—Several weeks ago [illegible] and I left Chicago on the great Iron railway for a Gulf city famed to one of the most attractive of the not very numerous Atlantic seaboard cities which erect their temple upon [illegible] between Hampton Roads and the mouth of the Florida Keys. [illegible] corresponding for a long while with a well known newspaper proprietor in that section of our diversified country, but had never met him in the flesh, personally, and [illegible] [illegible] upon him, without ceremony, and [illegible] latch string hanging out.

When Bill Wade [illegible] Col. Rodgers (which, by the by, is his name) was [illegible] in hand shaking and kindly words of welcome. The New York editor [illegible] see, however, that he had dropped in upon the right friend at the wrong time. It was, in fact the colonel's lucky day, which, as a regular thing, came to him about six times every week. Yet there was nothing to be talked about over, no [illegible] to be inquired, affairs of common interest to be discussed, and [illegible] recently appointed postmaster to be inspected by the New Yorker. He tried hard to beg off, but the inexorable colonel said:

"You can't deceive a thousand Dutchmen to save me, major, and I feel I have up to my ears in business. It's always this way down here. However, I'll tell you, evidently to treat you as a gentlemen should be treated. There is a committee waiting on my private office, consisting of seventeen gentlemen to write or dictate and [illegible] advertising contract to be revised; but I don't care if you [illegible] you [illegible] we go, eh?"

So briefly mounting a street car they went to the roof of a five [illegible] and [illegible] five minutes' pause, to north, south, east and west, at the really picturesque municipal [illegible] breadth and [illegible] at the [illegible] and the [illegible] sun reflecting river [illegible], with the gleaming, billowy ocean beyond. Then, floor by floor, they descended until the outer portal was [illegible] and [illegible] hearty mutual parting grasp [illegible]

It was while they were slowly coming downstairs that a boy employed in the office [illegible] close to the colonel's elbow and [illegible] said:

"They are waiting for you, sir, to make a quorum."

"Yes, yes," replied the urbane and [illegible] colonel, "I'll be with you pretty [illegible] [illegible] to wait for a [illegible] minutes."

Another department was [illegible] to the New Yorker, and upon [illegible] a moment. This time it was a dynamic, shirt, Utah Heap style of desk clerk, who spoke with [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible]

He [illegible] a cylinder roll of ordinary [illegible] paper.

"I'll be there—in fifteen minutes, Mr. Crockett. They must be patient."

He dismissed the [illegible] clerk with an [illegible] wave of [illegible] and turned into another room. The New Yorker felt [illegible] him, felt [illegible] compliment, but wisely kept his own [illegible] method of words. Finally, the entire [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
